

The Missing Article

Today there was going to be an article relating a release date for KDE 4.0 to a really cool project I've been working on that once linked against the KDE 4 libraries, why it currently doesn't but might again in the future, but since the latest update to Mac OS X, I've been getting kernel panics twice each day. One of these happened when I had about two paragraphs left to write. Normally I write these out by hand before typing them in, but this time I didn't do that and now the article is gone. Some day I might rewrite it, but right now I'm too tired to do that.

Update: 2007/12/04 Until Apple issues a real fix for this problem, the kernel panics seem to go away if IPv6 is disabled.
